REQUIRED TEXT: Law and Contemporary Corrections by Christopher E. Smith; Wadsworth Publishing (2000)

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Demonstrate an in-depth knowledge of the operations of the U.S. Supreme Court, the Justices, and their influence in correctional operations and policies
Develop an awareness of how the constitutional rights are interpreted by the Court to establish case law
Demonstrate knowledge of the processes by which inmates file lawsuits
Develop the skills necessary for using the web to research case law

ATTENDANCE AND PARTICIPATION
Students are required to attend all classroom sessions. Class roll will be taken. There are no provisions for excused, or unexcused, absences in this course. Students are expected to participate in class discussions. In order to do so, students need to follow the course schedule and complete the readings before the day the topic is to be discussed.

OUT-OF-CLASS ASSIGNMENTS
Three written assignments will be required, two of them worth 100 points each and one worth 200 points for a total of 400 points. The assignments must be typed, double-spaced, using appropriate grammar, punctuation, and spelling with one-inch margins on all sides. Instructions for these assignments will be distributed in class.

COURSE EXAMINATIONS
Exams will be based on lecture, text, and extra assigned readings. The exams will predominately be compiled of multiple choice, true/false, and/or matching. There will be two in-class exams, each worth 200 points.

IN-CLASS EXERCISES
Several in-class exercises will be used to determine the students’ ability to apply what they learn through textbook readings, lecture material, and additional assigned readings to the topic of correctional law. Students must complete these exercises in class. Students absent from class the day the exercise is to be completed will lose any points awarded. 200 points will be available for completion of in-class exercises.
