Dear Colleagues,

For the past few months I've had writer's block. You may have noticed that the February issue of VCAA News did not appear. It is only two, in mid-March, that my creativity may have returned. As the Vice Chancellor for IUSB's library recently wrote from Israel, where she is a Fulbright Scholar, about the efficiency of Dickinson software: "I am in the writer's block prison. Ah! Glorious Spring!!"

With the on-line document system, we can truly say that the ease and speed with which I am able to retrieve articles I need for my writing and research has been extraordinary. I am in the writer's block prison. Ah! Glorious Spring!!

Schwartz and Friedman also discussed and answered questions about the literary side that nurtured the poems, their translation into English, and the process of working from Biblical sources. The poems are part of the long Jewish tradition of midrash, a process of addressing complexities in Biblical texts by annotation and retelling. Sources. We have assembled a new anthology of contemporary Israeli Poets Writing On The Book of Genesis. All of the original poems were written by a very broad range of contemporary Israeli poets as part of a rich literary and religious tradition that continues to find challenge and inspiration in the stories and people of the Book of Genesis.

The search for the Director of General Education has been re-opened. Additional information regarding the position can be found online. I encourage interested faculty to apply. The position description can be found at the link below.

For a while, later that afternoon, I received an e-mail from Dean Freitas, a gentle reminder, that this cycle of VCAA News did not appear. It is only now, in mid-March, that my creativity may have returned. As the Vice Chancellor for IUSB's library recently wrote from Israel, where she is a Fulbright Scholar, about the efficiency of Dickinson software: "I am in the writer's block prison. Ah! No problem, Violante. I am already working with weekend training for a group of new faculty, and the OIE has just received a grant to develop a website to support our candidate. Please refer to the following link for detailed information:
