Dear Friends,

This issue of the Chancellor’s Annual Report highlights the progress Indiana University South Bend made in 2006-07 on the six priorities defined in the campus strategic plan.

There were many accomplishments in the past academic year including approval of student housing, completion of the IU South Bend Elkhart Center, and the work of outstanding faculty and students.

The Chancellor’s Annual Report also highlights the benefactors who donated to IU South Bend in 2006-07. Your support helps the campus pursue its goals and serve the community. Your generosity is deeply appreciated.

I hope you enjoy reading about some of the accomplishments of the campus, faculty and students over the past year.

Thank you for your support of IU South Bend.

Sincerely,

Una Mae Reck, Chancellor
Mission Statement

Indiana University South Bend is the comprehensive undergraduate and graduate regional campus of Indiana University that is committed to serving north central Indiana and southwestern Michigan. Its mission is to create, disseminate, preserve, and apply knowledge. The campus is committed to excellence in teaching, learning, research, and creative activity; to strong liberal arts and sciences programs and professional disciplines; to acclaimed programs in the arts and nursing/health professions; and to diversity, civic engagement, and a global perspective. IU South Bend supports student learning, access, and success for a diverse residential and non-residential student body that includes under-represented and international students. The campus fosters student-faculty collaboration in research and learning. Committed to the economic development of its region and state, Indiana University South Bend meets the changing educational and research needs of the community and serves as a vibrant cultural resource.

Approved by the IU Board of Trustees, November 2005
In fall 2006, IU South Bend enrolled 7,420 students taking 69,981 credit hours. The campus also welcomed a record number of transfer students (572) and had a 3.1 percent increase in the size of its freshman class (2,065). African-American enrollment increased almost 4 percent to stand at 505 students and Hispanic enrollment increased 21.7 percent to stand at 269 students. IU South Bend enrolled 207 international students from approximately 70 countries. The campus saw a 14 percent increase in non-resident students which now comprise over 6 percent of the student body. In 2006, 62 percent of undergraduates at IU South Bend were full-time students.

The Indiana University South Bend Strategic Plan is organized into six priorities. They are as follows:

- Foster Student Access & Success
- Encourage & Maintain Academic Excellence
- Enhance Diversity in the Curriculum, Classroom, & Campus
- Strengthen Partnerships with the Community
- Heighten Recognition & Accomplishments
- Reflect & Expand a Global Perspective

Each priority is integrated into the campus strategic plan and has its own goals, metrics, and accountabilities. In 2006-07, IU South Bend had many accomplishments for each priority. The following pages highlight some of those accomplishments. The examples serve as a small measure of the many successes of the campus, students, faculty, and staff in the past year.
IU South Bend is a gateway to the future for hopeful and gifted students.

The steps on the road to success include a helping hand during the freshman year and wise guidance as graduation approaches. Academic Learning Services had 8,500 student contacts, which was a 6 percent increase over the previous year. Career Services reported a 48.1 percent increase, or 2,063 appointments with individuals or groups.

Understanding that not every student learns the same, IU South Bend provides the campus Learning Center which offers grammar and study skills workshops. Eleven podcasts were offered for punctuation.

Supplemental Instruction (SI) is offered for those who need additional help. Students using SI, which is a weekly study session by an upperclassman, had a semester completion rate of 95.5 percent compared with 74.5 percent for non-users.

Access to the best education is secured with financial assistance. The IU South Bend Financial Aid department awarded $30,831,845 in aid, which is an 8 percent increase over last year, and 288 scholarships were awarded totaling $357,753.

In order to meet the needs of the students and the marketplace, three new degree programs were approved: Bachelor of Science in Dental Hygiene, Master of Science in Medical Imaging Technology and Master of Science in Nursing.

The School of Education added the Transition to Teaching program which gives those with bachelor’s degrees a streamlined path to an education degree.

The campus received $100,000 from the Lumina Foundation to support the 21st Century Scholars Program.

The School of Business & Economics presented the annual Entrepreneurship Lecture Series sponsored by Lake City Bank. Twelve local business leaders presented information to students about aspects of entrepreneurship including business plans, financing and franchising.

photo at right; The Entrepreneurship Lecture Series for the School of Business and Economics entered into its fourth year of bringing leaders to campus to address business issues.
In order to compete on the world’s stage, the campus is constantly examining its programs to remain relevant. IU South Bend’s strength is in superb instructors who are active in research, publishing and teaching. The faculty has created an excellent environment for learning. Many members of the faculty were recognized in 2006-07 for their work.

For example, IU Founders Day award recipients included Ken Smith (English) who received the W. George Pennell Award for Outstanding Service and Patricia Lewis (mathematics) received the Part-Time Teaching Award.

Douglas Agbetsiafa (business), Gretchen Anderson (chemistry), Catherine Borsukh (psychology), Yi Cheng (mathematics), Nancy Colburn (library), John Davis (world languages), Karen Gindele (English), Barbara Keith (nursing), Judy Lewandowski (education), Isabel O’Connor (history), Scott Semau (sociology and anthropology), Bruce Spitzer (education), Connie Sprague (education), Ganesan Vaidyanathan (business) and LuAnn Woodrick (nursing) received IU Trustees’ Teaching Awards.

Marta Makielski (nursing) was the recipient of the IU School of Nursing Alumni Association Special Recognition Award and the Memorial Hospital Spirit of Women Award. Dean of the School of Nursing and Health Professions Mary Jo Regan-Kubinski was the recipient of the Jeannette Chamberlain Award by the Society for Education and Research in Psychiatric Nursing Division of the International Society of Psychiatric Mental Health Nurses for outstanding contribution to the discipline.

James Wolfer (computer sciences) received an award from the International Conference on Engineering and Computer Science for his contributions to the field. Jerry Hinnefeld (physics and astronomy) presented the annual Faculty Research Award Lecture on current topics in nuclear physics. De Bryant (psychology) delivered the Lunquist Fellowship Lecture on the human spirit and change.

Several large grants were present for research. Kevin Ladd (psychology) received a three year grant for $735,000 from the Templeton Foundation to study prayer. Murli Nair (biology) received $178,000 as part of a $620,000 National Science Foundation grant. Dan Olson (sociology and anthropology) was co-principle investigator on a £80,000 grant from the Economic and Social Research Council in the United Kingdom.
IU South Bend is committed to helping students understand today’s ever more diverse society, including different cultures, traditions and ethnic groups. Personal and intellectual growth occurs when students are exposed to different people from various societies.

The campus continues to reflect the communities it serves. Nearly 12 percent of the student body identifies themselves as a minority. Hispanic enrollment is up 82 percent since 2000 from 152 students to 276.

In 2006, 41 students from area high schools and incoming freshman enrolled in the summer Leadership Academy. The academy gives students a taste of college while studying national and local civil and human rights history. A highlight of the academy is a bus trip that highlights the growth of the African-American and Latino neighborhoods in South Bend.

More than 1,500 people participated in campus diversity programs in 2006-07. The Office of Campus Diversity presented its 10th annual Conversations on Race with speaker Manning Marable, a professor of public affairs, political science, history and African-American studies at Columbia University.

Marable spoke on the importance of closing the educational gap between African-Americans and Caucasians in the United States. In his remarks he pointed out that only 14 percent of American families who made under $20,000 were able to afford education.

The following day more than 200 high school students participated in a leadership conference. This was a 100 percent increase in participation from the previous year.

Another annual event is the Midwest Black Man’s Think Tank. In 2006 the program focused on keeping young African-American males in school. The two day event featured speakers Michael J. Cuyjet, associate dean of the School of Education of the University of Louisville, and Vernon G. Smith, Indiana state representative from Gary. Both men spoke on the importance of keeping African-American men in college.

Extended Learning Services obtained a grant from Key Bank to help bridge the cultural and language division in the workplace by offering Spanish and English classes for employees in several manufacturing facilities in Elkhart.

IU South Bend has sound partnerships in business, education, health care, arts and government in the Michiana area. The campus strives to make these partnerships stronger by engaging the community, opening doors and minds.

One of the strongest partnerships is with the Elkhart community. A group of Elkhart business leaders raised $4 million in private donations to build the 25,000-square-foot IU South Bend Elkhart Center, which is its first permanent location in downtown.

CTS Corp. of Elkhart contributed $475,000 to endow the CTS Center for Experiential Learning for the School of Business and Education. The center will expand learning opportunities for students through case studies, client projects and internships.

The campus has continued to work closely with the city of South Bend and South Bend Heritage Foundation to complete the renovations on the Engman Natatorium. The facility will provide outreach and educational opportunities through the Civil Rights Heritage Center.

IU South Bend and Ivy Tech Community College North Central enjoy a strong collaborative relationship, which was reinforced with a joint advising workshop. In addition formal articulation agreements were signed for 11 majors including business administration and criminal justice. More than 100 courses transfer from the 23 Ivy Tech institutions to Indiana University.

Numerous IU South Bend students volunteered in local schools, homeless centers and hospitals. Sixteen students again spent spring break assisting Katrina survivors in the Gulf Coast region.

Bag Fest in April brought hundreds of people to campus to recycle plastic bags and talk about environmental issues. More than 75,000 plastic bags were recycled through a partnership with Wal-Mart.

The faculty and students raised the bar of discussion with public forums such as the American Democracy Project, the Vagina Monologues, and guest speaker Mohja Kahf, who spoke on issues facing Islamic women.

WVPE’s Michiana Chronicles received a Regional 2007 Edward R. Murrow Award for writing from the Radio and Television News Directors Association. Five of the six contributors to the commentaries, Jonathan Nashel (history), Louise Collins (philosophy), April Lidinsky (women’s studies), Joe Chaney, and Ken Smith (both English), are faculty members.
2006-07 was historic for IU South Bend as the building of student housing was approved by the Indiana University Board of Trustees. Construction of eight, two-story apartment buildings and a community building will be completed for the beginning of classes in fall 2008. For the latest information on student housing go to www.housing.iusb.edu.

History was also made with the opening of the IU South Bend Elkhart Center in August. Construction of the $4.2 million facility was paid for by private donations raised by a dedicated group of Elkhart business and civic leaders. The dedication ceremony was a community celebration led by Indiana University President Michael McRobbie.

In its 2007 session, the Indiana General Assembly included funding for the IU South Bend Education and Arts Building in the state budget. The $27 million project will renovate the existing Associates Building on campus into a modern classroom facility.

Student, faculty and campus accomplishments were reported in the local news media and promoted in publications and other material produced by the Office of Communications and Marketing. IU South Bend was mentioned in more than 300 articles in the South Bend Tribune and other area newspapers.

The campus continued to use advertising on television, radio, newspaper, and magazines to recruit undergraduate and graduate students.

IU South Bend had the largest contingent of students, faculty, staff and alumni to attend the annual Get on the Bus trip to the state legislature. The annual event is an opportunity for all IU campuses to talk to state legislators about issues in higher education.

IU South Bend distributed an Experts Guide to local media and civic organizations. The brochure highlights faculty and staff who are available for interviews and presentations.

The campus theme for 2006-07 was “Diversity and Dialogue.” The campus theme offered opportunities for discussion of issues and beliefs that tend to divide people. As part of the campus theme, the One Book, One Campus program featured The Spirit Catches You and You Fall Down, by Anne Fadiman. The campus and the community were invited to read and discuss the book.

Heighten Recognition and Accomplishments

IU South Bend continues to foster a global perspective by integrating international programming, students, and cultures into the campus curriculum and environment.

In 2006-07, the campus had the largest number of students to study abroad in its history. Sixty-eight students traveled to Mexico, Europe and the Dominican Republic. A new program sent students with cameras to study the street scenes of Florence.

Exchange partnerships continued with an exchange with Universite du Sud, Toulon-Var, which brought one faculty person (Francisco Albizu-Labbe) and two students (Laura Fiore and Asya Mazourova) to IU South Bend. Asya returned for the fall 2007 as an international student.

As part of the exchange, IU South Bend sent one student (Aryn Schounce) and two faculty members to Toulon. Paul Herr (geography) and Jonathan Nashel (history) lectured on American studies.

A new exchange program with Northern Galilee University received an exchange affiliation grant and a Fulbright Visiting Scholar for the fall of 2007.

The Office of International Student Services (OISS) worked with approximately 200 international students on campus. OISS serves as a home away from home for these students from more than 70 countries. The OISS promotes the campus to the international community and recruits international students to be educated at IU South Bend. The office helped with the daily issues of housing, classes and finances.

Scott Sernau (sociology) was appointed the director of the Office of International Programs. Under Sernau’s leadership, an East Asian minor is being developed to add to the new European Studies minor and the long standing Latin American studies program.

In February, UCET and International Programs presented the initial Global Celebration that featured IU South Bend overseas study opportunities and new global projects.

The International Food Fest had record attendance and broad co-sponsorship across the campus.

Indiana University South Bend is grateful to the hundreds of donors who expressed their confidence in the campus through generous gifts. This list includes contributions to all areas of the university July 1, 2006, through June 30, 2007.
