Life abroad presents challenges. Maintaining equilibrium in the face of changes in diet, hygiene, and comfort requires tolerance, flexibility and humor. Students must have the social and personal maturity to adapt to a new cultural environment.

International programs staff and trip leaders encourage all students to participate in study abroad programs. As much as is possible, trip leaders will prepare accommodations for students with documented disabilities. Some trips include visits to sites that require students to be able to engage in strenuous physical activities or walking or hiking in the heat. In these cases, students should talk to trip leaders about alternative activities. At the same time, students should be aware that summers in Florence, Mexico, and Greece can be quite warm, and many buildings do not have air conditioning. Trip leaders and international programs staff will work with students to help them find the best trip to fit their needs.

Trip leaders make the final determination regarding the selection of student participants for IU South Bend study abroad programs. They will evaluate students’ academic records, participation in extracurricular activities, and overall readiness for study abroad. Trip leaders also consider the extent to which students would benefit from and contribute to an IU South Bend study abroad program.

Write a short (one to two page) typed essay in which you respond to the following questions and points:
Describe why you chose this program and how it fits into your academic and personal goals.
What experiences and skills do you have that will help you have a successful study abroad experience and contribute to the group’s success?

All candidates for the Greece program must schedule a short meeting with Professor Harry Vasilopoulos. Trip leaders for other programs may also wish to schedule meetings with students should the trip leaders have questions about students’ records or readiness for a study abroad experience.

I certify that the preceding statements are correct and true. I give my approval to have the information in my University records, including academic, medical and disciplinary records, made available to the Office of International Programs and cooperating institutions, with the understanding that the information will be kept confidential to the extent provided by the law.
