Molly 2 – Back to School, Happy and Broke

End of the Semester...

It's the end of the semester and grade wise I did really well. I proved to myself that I could overcome some pretty hard challenges, but sometimes I needed the help of the Writing Center to pull me through. I also noticed that going into chat with my professors helped, as well. Sometimes just talking about different theories helped to understand them better.

My trip to the Wellness Center was very helpful. The visit was extremely quick and professional and a whole lot cheaper than a regular doctor. They gave me a prescription for my migraines that I needed as well as advice on how to cut down the stress in my life, such as yoga classes (which were offered for free at the SAC) and other relaxation techniques.

As far as money goes, at least I know now that it's near impossible to simply live on student loans. But apparently there are hundreds of jobs for students on campus. They don't pay a lot, but it's enough to get by. A friend of mine helped me get a job at the library. The good thing about working there is that I can work shifts in between my classes and my schedule is very flexible. All of my supervisors have been in my position before and understand what it's like to be a full-time student. Also, it's going to look great on my resume and it's wonderful experience!
